[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Beloit, Wis., Sept. 5.—Yesterday afternoon between one o'clock and five C. C. Entrance was obtained through a window which opened onto the roof of the porch on the second floor where Mr. Fink's room is.

Mr. Fink evidently suspects some one and told the police that a man was seen coming out of the room during the afternoon. He would not, however, give any names.

The democratic county committee will meet a week from today to select a man to oppose George E. Thorpe, republican nominee for county treasurer. The democrats failed to nominate a candidate for the office owing to the late withdrawal from the ticket of Park Roderick, who was up for the primary.

Mr. Bryan will divide the remainder of the week between Illinois and several of the neighboring states.

Mr. Taft, refreshed by a week of recreation at Middle Bass Island, will go to Cincinnati, where he plans to spend the greater part of the time between now and election. An entire floor at the Shinton hotel has been reserved for the use of the candidate and his campaign aides, which fact is taken as an indication that he does not intend to remain idle during the two months he will spend in his home city.

An interesting political contest that has agitated the state of Washington for several months past will culminate in a general state primary, the first to be held in that state. European Events.
The second annual congress of the Playground Association of America will bring together the mayors, park, school and health officers of the chief cities of the United States and leading educators and play experts, with the idea of stimulating every city in the country to make adequate playground provisions for its population.

Fiendish Degenerate Jesse Pomeroy Of Boston, Still Hopes For Freedom--Story Of His Crime.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 5.—Jesse Pomeroy, one of the most notorious prisoners in the United States, tomorrow will enter upon the thirty-second year of his confinement behind the gray walls of the famous state prison at Charlestown. All of these years have been passed in solitary confinement.

When he was 14 years old Pomeroy was sentenced to prison for life for torturing and murdering little children. He is now 48 years old and looks to be much older. Despite his long incarceration, he apparently still hopes of a pardon, though he has never been given the slightest encouragement.

In the early 70's Jesse Pomeroy and his crimes were discussed from one end of the country to the other. He was found guilty of the murder of a child, and was sentenced to life in prison. He was later released, but was again sentenced to life in prison for the murder of a child.

On the day after Christmas, 1871, a child named Paine, living in Chelsea, was found unconscious, tied to a beam on Powder Horn Hill. His entirely nude body was covered with great welts. When he recovered his father and the police learned that he had met an older boy, who had led him away from the public street, and had then, in spite of his weak protests, taken off his clothes and struck him again and again with a rope.

Before the general excitement over his mysterious assault had died away, another little boy, named Tracy Hayden, was found in an out-of-the-way place, stripped and tied by ropes to a board. His front teeth were missing, the bridge of his nose was broken, and on other parts of his body were a score of bruises. The child told a tale similar to that related by the first boy who had been assaulted.

This second dastardly assault inflamed the whole community. It was argued that no person of ordinary criminal or vicious instincts could have committed such wanton cruelties. The assaults were clearly the work of a degenerate. Fathers throughout Chelsea and South Boston wished to burn him at the stake. Mothers, when their children were long absent from home, became hysterical.

For three months thereafter no further assaults of this nature were reported, and families began to breathe easier. But one day in early July, 1872, Johnny Dulch, a boy of 5 years, returned to his home in South Boston on the verge of delirium and convulsions. Two hours before he said he

Hotels Were Filled to Overflowing and Many Transients Staid in Private Homes.
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Evansville, Sept. 4.—The tenth annual Rock county fair has passed and was a grand success from start to finish. So large was the crowd of visitors in the city all the week that the hotels were obliged to send many of their transients to private homes to sleep. The fair officials are greatly pleased with the financial results. It is not known as yet just how much the surplus will be. It is generally conceded that the exhibits and entertainments were much better than those of any previous year. The ball games were one of the biggest attractions and never before has there been so many fine catchers on the Evansville team. Result of today's races follows:

Rock County Candidate
For A Seat In Congress

Democrats of the First District have nominated as their candidate for Congress a representative business man, H. A. Moshenphal of Clinton. He is well known to the people of Rock county. For twenty years he has been a country banker and has been identified with the independent telephone movement since its inception. Though not a politician, he has been in business life a vigorous defender of the rights of the people. The high regard in which he is held by his fellow men is evidenced by the positions of responsibility which he fills in his home community and the state at large. He has been for years a member of the school board of his home city; is a trustee of Lawrence University; and is a member of the executive committee of the Wisconsin State Bankers' association. In his young manhood he was a union day-laborer, having followed the craft of a printer. Altogether, he is a typical, clean, self-made American citizen and a forcible public speaker who will be heard from and will give a good account of himself during the forthcoming election canvass.

CARRIE JACOBS BOND
RECITAL ON SEPT. 14

Past Year Has Been Procession of Triumphs For Janesville's Talented Former Resident.

Janesville people are to enjoy an evening with Carrie Jacobs Bond, at Library hall, Monday evening, Sept. 14, and a splendid program of original songs and stories will be forthcoming from this city's talented former resident. The past year, for her, has been one of repeated triumphs, beginning with her appearance last November at the White House, where she sang by request of the President at a dinner given for the late Joe Chandler Harris ("Uncle Remus"), who has been called upon to entertain people in many climes. Her visit to the Hawaiian Islands was another triumph, and she was later with flowers and shrubs—"treasures of good will," they call them—and many valuable tokens of esteem from those generous-hearted people, when she sailed away. At Los Angeles she was enthusiastically received and gave four entertainments before large audiences. At Pasadena Mrs. Robert J. Bayliffe, the humorist's wife, entertained in her honor. Of her appearance before President and Mrs. Roosevelt, it is said that the national executive and the first lady of the land were delighted with her originality and made her very happy with their sincere words of appreciation.

Writing of Mrs. Bond in the Banner of Gold magazine, Mary Radcliffe Powell says: "For a plain, shy little girl in Janesville, Wis., with delicate health, apparently no talent above the average, and certainly with a voice of no rare distinction, to stand today with an international reputation for her unique and diversified talents of entertaining, to have sung and 'talked' her way into the hearts of her own American brothers and sisters from the humblest houses to the White House, her English 'cousin' and German 'uncle' and the 'little friends' of the Isles of the Sea; to have sung with and for the greatest vocalists of the world, doesn't that sound something like a fairy tale? But it is all true, and the great thing about it is that it has all come about through her own determination and hard work."

And elsewhere the same writer says: "Here comes a woman whose voice is a wonderful composite of wit, pathos, and philosophy; who writes the music to fit their rhythm; and then sings them with a voice that searches out the remotest corners of your hearts. I said SING, but just as often she TAKES them to wonderfully elusive, rippling accompaniments of her own creation, with the same effect. One critic has said of her: musically, she is an impressionist. She creates the idea with an stroke and expects you to catch it. If you do not, you belong to the class we ought to be sorry for."

Arch-Bishop Messmer Conferred With Members of New St. Jude's Parish of Beloit.
Beloit, Wis., Sept. 5.—Arch-Bishop Messmer of the Milwaukee diocese of the Catholic church was greeted here this past week by about one hundred and fifty members of St. Jude's parish at the event of his first visit to the new church. Archbishop Messmer was here for the purpose of discussing the plans of the future in the church with the members and such was the nature of the meeting. Although the meeting was not held for the purpose of settling definitely upon any of the plans it was held for the purpose of giving the new members a better understanding of what was before them and it is now believed that it will not be very many months before these plans will begin to materialize.

St. Jude's parish is only an infant church, measuring in terms of time, but it has a membership over two hundred strong. The organization was made a corporation on last Wednesday. It was formerly a portion of St. Thomas' parish but owing to the rapid increase in the growth of the membership, it was thought a wise policy to establish a second church in the city. Father Joseph E. Hanz, associate pastor of the Rev. Father M. J. Ward, was appointed pastor of the new church by Archbishop Messmer and he has placed his whole heart and soul into the work.

The Northwestern tracks, running north and south on Fifth street on the west side of the river, were made on the division line and all west of that street were made members of the new parish.

Office will be open from 8 a. m. to 3 p. m. and from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. Money order department open from 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. only. Carriers will make their usual morning delivery, and be at their windows from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. Rural route service suspended for the day.

SOME SIDELIGHTS ON
FR. VAUGHAN'S PLAY

Clerical Playwright and Star in Production Once Appeared in the Same Theatrical Company.
At the Myers theatre Saturday next and the Monday following, the people of Janesville will have an opportunity to see for the first time "A Woman of the West," by Father L. J. Vaughan. This dramatic production of Janesville's popular lecturer created a furor in Chicago where it had its successful try-out last May. Father Vaughan during the past week has been in attendance at the final rehearsals of the play. He will also be present at the first performance to see that it is in every way smooth in accord with his ideas.

When the play was produced in Chicago its success was so great that many of the friends of the priest went there to see it. The reports which they brought back were such as to confirm in every way the high eulogiums which were pronounced by the Press. That Father Vaughan should make so striking a success of his first venture in the field of the playwright was not surprising to his friends. Those who know him best appreciate the great value which he places upon action, and they knew anything he might write in this line would be full of that sort of ginger which has made his style upon the platform so popular and his services there in such great demand.

There is a bit of romance back of the writing of this play. Years ago before Father Vaughan recognized his calling to the priesthood he was an actor. Annie Mack Berlein, the star of "A Woman of the West," Father Vaughan's play, was at the head of one of the companies in which he appeared. She gave valuable counsel and advice to the young man on his stage work. Although on the full road to success as an actor, the stage did not satisfy the soul yearnings. Convinced by a friend that he should realize the priesthood, he studied and was finally ordained. Desires to add certain charitable work in which he was interested led him to go upon the lecture platform about five years ago.

Passing through Chicago in 1905, he dropped into McVicker's theatre, and on the stage saw his old-time friend, Annie Mack Berlein. He sent his card to her, but she did not recall any man of his name with the name of "The Priest." But when the man behind the card came into her presence, she knew at once the young actor of other days. This visit resulted in the request from the actress to the priest that he write her a play. She desired one which would give expression of the strong mother-love of the Irish woman. Father Vaughan consented and "A Woman of the West" is the result. Since its production in Chicago the priest has been crowded with requests from others to write for the stage.

Annie Mack Berlein, the star of "The Woman of the West," is one of the most versatile actresses upon the American stage. For years she created a line of characters which made her famous in New York, and the management of Harrigan & Hart. The late Jefferson, being present at one of her performances, said: "That is the woman that I want for Grotchen," and season after season she was the leading woman for this "grand old man" of the American stage and the only actress he ever honored by having his picture taken with her, he in the character of "Harp" and now stage "Papa." Of late years Mrs. Berlein has spent considerable time in Australia, playing a round of characters in the Williams houses. The success which attended her try-out of Father Vaughan's play in Chicago where she was compelled to extend the time of its engagement, in order partially to meet the demand for seats, convinced her that the play would be a success and she felt warranted in giving it a handsome production. A carload of scenery is used and the company which she has engaged is one of the best dramatic organizations on the road. As Father Vaughan's play is full of strong character parts every member of the company has been chosen because he is the type fitted to become the character for which cast.

AKRON OFFICER IS HERE ON A VISIT
J. W. McDonald, Formerly of This City, Thinks Rubber Metropolis is Best Policed Town in Country.

Officer J. W. McDonald of the Akron, Ohio, police force is here for a visit with his sister, Mrs. John Rieg, 357 High street. He was born in Watertown and resided in Janesville for two years about 33 years ago. Akron was a city of 15,000 when he went there in 1875 and he has seen it grow to a metropolis of 55,000 with 19 rubber factories, one of them employing 2,500 men, big pottery and stove works, and other large manufacturing. He thinks it is one of the best policed municipalities in America. Patrols are open from 5 o'clock to 12 midnight on week days—all weapons removed—and closed tight thereafter and on Sundays. The police force has 50 men, including a chief, and two captains who receive $1,200 a year. They have a police automobile and all the officers carry 20-inch hipster sticks. Patrolmen receive $75 a month, a day off each month, and a four-day vacation each year. They work 10 hours. The chief is paid $1,500 a year with state fees amounting to $300. The mayor is also police judge.

THE LATEST SNAPSHOT OF MRS. HETTY GREEN STANDING ON THE FRONT PORCH OF HER BELLOW FALLS' SUMMER HOME.

LITTLE JOURNEYS TO THE SUMMER HOMES OF FAMOUS PEOPLE.

Bellow Falls, Vt.—Of all the eccentric people in the United States, Mrs. Hetty Green, the wealthiest woman in the world stands champion. This modern creature with her vast property wealth and ready cash spends her summer vacation in a dilapidated and neglected old home at Bellow Falls, Vt., in the midst of a factory district, where the smoke is so thick that it frequently cuts off the sun's rays from her diminutive haven. Just why she sees fit to take her meager vacation here while her wealth would afford an opportunity to live in luxury in any American or European resort is a problem hard to solve. So far as is known she has no particular liking for the town of Bellow Falls, although she has stated that at some time she expects to permanently reside here. It is said by some that one reason for her doing this is that the property is unsalable and as she owns it she feels she must get some value out of it, and therefore takes this means of getting value received.

When she arrived here a few days ago with the intention of spending two weeks away from Wall street, no person who was not acquainted with her would ever have guessed that the bent, care-worn woman alighting was assisted from a coach of the New York flyer, clutching in one arm a peacefully sleeping sky ferrier and gripping in the other hand a badly worn imitation alligator bag, was the richest woman in the world. No carriage awaited her because she did not want one. She had no luggage. She came unheralded, and although the trainmen knew her there was no rushing to do her service, for there was no need and besides they knew she would have waved aside the solicitations or even courtesies. Alone she trudged through the town and slowly as if her long journey had fatigued her. The shopkeepers saw her and knew her and the passersby all recognized in her face a woman who had been the cause of no pleasurable anticipation among the sellers of goods, for they knew that only in the rarest moments of self forgetfulness would she buy from them.

Mrs. Green's daughter, Sylvia, preceded her by a week and had the house ready to receive her mother when she arrived.

The Green house was formerly a splendid type of the old colonial building, but it is now the most ill-appearing of the dwellings along Church street. It is a brown brick with great square chimneys and an old fashioned porch of meager dimensions in front. The roof is badly in need of repair and has a ragged appearance, bearing out the story current in town "once, 14 years ago, Mrs. Green had a carpenter working on the house for 17 minutes."

Some years ago when Andrew Carnegie was in the height of his library distribution, Bellow Falls was brought to his attention, with the result that he promised to supply the funds for the building. If the town would provide the site, Hetty Green's riches and the excellent position of her property on Church street were all taken into consideration by the library committee. One bright morning they called en masse upon the richest woman in the world to ask for the contribution of the site or its sale.

After about three minutes, it is said the committee filed out of the front door, replaced their hats and thereupon avoided conversation on Hetty Green and the library site.

DEATH SUMMONS

PATIENT SUFFERING ENDED AT 5:30 THIS MORNING.

HIS SUCCESSFUL CAREER

Managed Gas Works Here For Many Years—Was Mayor in 1874 and Assemblyman in 1875.

After many months of patient suffering, Hiram Merrill died at 5:30 this morning and the final spirit went out to the life beyond. Death, even when long expected, always comes as a sad surprise, and so the home today, which has long been cheered by his presence, is shadowed in deep bereavement, for he was a thoughtful husband and loving father.

Hiram Merrill was born January 14, 1829, in the town of Adams, Jefferson county, New York. His parents, David and Eunice (Lord) Merrill, were natives of the state of Maine and became pioneers in Wisconsin. This first ancestor of the family in this country was Nathaniel Merrill, who came from England in 1635 and settled at Newbury, Mass.

David Merrill, the father of Hiram Merrill, kept a hotel for a time in Massachusetts, St. Lawrence Co., New York and removed from there to Cleveland, Ohio. In 1857 he drove with horse teams to Milwaukee, arriving in November of that year. He was identified

Red with business interests in that place for the balance of his life. During this time among other business ventures he maintained a shipyard where he constructed many vessels.

Hiram, the sixth of the family, was reared chiefly in Milwaukee, receiving his education in the public schools of that city. Much of his early labor was given to his father's shipyard. On the 5th of March, 1849, he started with a party for California with ox teams. They crossed the summit of the Sierras on the 27th of September.

For three years Mr. Merrill engaged in mining and spent two years in conducting water from the mountains by ditches, which he sold to miners for hydraulic purposes. Returning by the Nicaragua route he arrived in Milwaukee in June, 1854. For ten years he was in the grain and real estate business there, and in 1864 went to Washington, New Jersey, where he engaged in mining. In July, 1866, he came to Janesville to take the management of the gas works.

Mr. Merrill was a member of the Christ Episcopal church. He was also a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was mayor of the city and also served as a member of the state legislature for Rock county.

On the 20th of October, 1876, Mr. Merrill was married to Miss Louisa Holland. To them were born three children, Harry E. Merrill, whose death some years ago was keenly felt by both father and mother, and from which they never fully recovered. Two daughters, Louise Addie, wife of Dr. T. H. Wiggin of Chicago, and Jessie Eugene Nowlin of this city, beside a wife, survive.

In the death of Mr. Merrill Janesville loses one of its old and well established land marks, for during a residence of more than 40 years he was in close touch with the interests of the city which he always delighted to call his home. Conservative, but not an obstructionist, he belonged to the class of men who contributed to public welfare.

He was a busy man, enjoying work more than play, and his money, directed by a brain that was always active and a mind possessed of rare good judgment, found its way into channels which contributed to permanent growth and stability.

His name on a board of directors inspired strength and confidence because of an unblemished character and reputation.

The people who knew Mr. Merrill on the street, however, did not know the man as did those who came in close contact with him.

To them he was an honest, upright citizen, but to his home and intimate friends, who shared his love and confidence, a noble of his nature was revealed which showed the man in thoughtful and loving solitude. He was not only honest, but just and considerate, and his friendship and comradeship was ever a choice inheritance.

He lived to a purpose and the world is better because he passed through it. His creed was a creed of justice and he entered the life beyond in full confidence.

The funeral will be held from the home Monday afternoon at four o'clock, and the remains will rest at Oak Hill.

Secretary M. H. # The BRASS BOWL

PICTURES BY A. Weil LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

The light appeared again, dancing athwart the inner wall of the room, and was lost as before. On impulse Mattland buttoned his top-coat across his chest, turning up the collar to hide his linen, darted stealthily a yard or two to one side, and with one noiseless bound reached the floor of the veranda. A breath later he stood by the front door, where, at first glance, he discovered the means of entrance used by the midnight marauder; the doors stood ajar, a black interval showing between them.

So that, then, was the way! Cautiously Mattland put a hand upon the knob and pushed.

A sharp, penetrating squeak brought him to an abrupt standstill, heart hammering shamefully again. Gathering himself to spring, if need be, he crept back toward the library windows, and reconnoitering cautiously determined the fact that the bolts had just been withdrawn on the inside of one window frame, which was swinging wide.

"It's a wise crack that provides his own quick exit," considered Mattland. The sagacious one was not, apparently, leaving at that moment. On the contrary, having made all things ready for a hurried flight upon the first alarm, the intruder, turned back, as was clearly indicated by the motion of the light within. The clink of steel touching steel became audible; and Mattland nodded. Bannerman was indeed justified; at that very moment the safe was being attacked.

Mattland returned noiselessly to the door. His mouth had settled into a hard, unyielding thin line; and a dangerous light flickered in his eyes. Temporarily the feller had stopped aside, giving place to the real man that was Mattland—the man ready to fight for his own, naked hands against firearms, if it need be. True, he had but to step into the gunroom to find weapons in plenty; but those must be then loaded to be of service, and precious moments wasted in the process—moments in which the burglar might gain access to and make off with his booty.

Mattland had no notion whatever of permitting anything of the sort to occur. He counted upon taking his enemy unawares, difficult as he believed such a feat would be, in the case of a professional cracksmen.

Down the hallway he groped his way to the library door, his fingers at length encountering its panels; it was closed, doubtless secured upon the inside; the slightest movement of the handle was calculated to alarm the housebreaker. Mattland paused, deliberating another and better plan, having in mind a short passageway connecting library and smoking room. In the library itself a heavy tapestry curtain hid the opening, while an equally heavy portiere took the place of a door at the other end. In the natural order of things a burglar would overlook this.

Inch by inch the young man edged into the smoking room, the door to which providentially stood unopened. Once within, it was but a moment's work to feel his way to the velvet folds and draw them aside, fortunately without rattling the brass rings from which the curtain depended. And then Mattland was in the passage, acutely on the alert, recognizing from the continued click of metal that his antagonist-to-be was still at his difficult task. Inch by inch—there was the tapestry! Very gently the householder pushed it aside.

An insidious aroma of scorching varnish (the dark lantern) penetrated the passage while he stood on its threshold, feeling for the electric light switch. Unhappily he missed this at the first cast, and—heard from within a quick, deep hiss of breath. Something had put the burglar on guard.

Another instant wasted, and it would be too late. The young man had to chance it. And he did, without further hesitation stepping boldly into the danger zone, at the same time making one final, desperate pass at the spot where the switch should have been—and missing it. On the instant there came a click of a different caliber from those that had preceded it. A revolver had been cocked, somewhere there in the blank darkness.

Mattland knew enough not to move. In another respect the warning came too late; his fingers had found the switch at last, and automatically had turned it.

The glare was blinding, momentarily; but the flash and report for which Mattland waited did not come. When his eyes had adjusted themselves to the suddenly altered conditions, he saw, directly before him and some six feet distant, a woman's slight figure, dark clad, resolute upon its two feet, head framed in veiling, features effectually disguised in a motor mask whose round, staring goggles shone blankly in the warm white light.

On her part, she seemed to recognize him instantaneously. On his . . .

It may as well be admitted that Mattland's wife were gone wool-gathering, temporarily at least; a state of mind not unpardonable when it is taken into consideration that he was called upon to grapple with and simultaneously to assimilate three momentous facts. For the first time in his life he found himself nose to nose with a revolver, and that one of abnormally and respect-compelling proportions. For the first time in his life, again, he was under necessity of dealing with a housebreaker. But most stupefying of all he found the fact that this housebreaker, this armed midnight marauder, was a woman! And so it was not altogether fearlessness that made him to all intents and purposes ignore the weapon; it is nothing to his credit for courage if his eyes struck past the black and deadly mouth of the revolver and looked only into the blank and expressionless eyes of the wind mask; it was not lack of respect for his skin's integrity, but the sheer, tremendous wonder of it all, that rendered him oblivious to the eternity that lay the other side of a slender, trembling finger-tip.

And so he stared, agape, until presently the weapon wavered and was lowered and the woman's voice, touched with irony, brought him to his senses.

"Oh," she remarked, coolly, "it's only you."

Thunderstruck, he was able no more than to parrot the pronoun: "You— you!"

"Were you expecting to meet any one else, here, to-night?" she inquired in suave mockery.

He lifted his shoulders helplessly, and tried to school his tongue to coherence. "I confess, . . . Well, certainly I didn't count on finding you here, Miss Wentworth. And the black cloak, you know—"

"Reverable, of course; gray inside, as you see—handsome Dan!" The girl laughed quietly, drawing aside an edge of the garment to reveal its inner face of silken gray and the fitted ruffles of the gray skirt underneath.

He nodded appreciation of the device, his mind now busy with speculations as to what he should do with the girl, now that he had caught her. At the same time he was vaguely vexed by her persistent repetition of the obnoxious nickname.

"Handsomeness Dan," he iterated all but mechanically. "Why do you call me that, please? Have we not before? I could swear, never before this night!"

"But you are altogether too modest," she laughed. "Not that it's a bad trait in the character of a professional . . . But really! It seems a bit incredible that any one so widely advertised as Handsomeness Dan Ansley should feel surprise at being recognized. Why, your portrait and biography have commanded space in every yellow journal in America recently!"

And, dropping the revolver into a pocket in her cloak, "I was afraid you might be a servant—or even Mattland," she diverted the subject, with a nod.

"But—but if you recognized me as Ansley, back there by the ford, didn't you suspect I'd drop in on you—?"

"Why, of course! Didn't you all but tell me that you were coming here?"

"But—"

"I thought perhaps I might get through before you came, Mr. Ansley; but I knew all the time that, even if you did manage to surprise me—or on the job, you wouldn't call the police." She laughed confidently, and—oddly enough—at the same time nervously. "You are certainly a very bold man, and as surely a very careless one, to run around the way you do without so much as troubling to srow a beard or a mustache, after your picture has been published broadcast."

Did he catch a gleam of admiration in the eyes behind the goggles?

"Now, if ever they get hold of my portrait and print . . . Well!" sighed the girl wistfully, lifting slim, bare fingers in affected concern to the mass of ruddy hair. "In that event I suppose I shall have to become a natural blonde!"

Her humor, her splendid fearlessness, the lightness of her" to be, combined with the half-laughing, half-serious look that she swept up at him, to ease the tension of his emotions. For the first time since entering the room, he smiled; then in silence for a time regarded her steadfastly, thinking.

So he resembled this burglar, Ansley, strongly enough to be mistaken for him—eh? Plainly enough the girl believed him to be Ansley. . . . Well, and why not? Why shouldn't he be Ansley for the time being, if it suited his purpose so to masquerade?

It might possibly suit his purpose. He thought his position one uncommonly difficult. As Mattland, he had on his hands a female thief, a hardened character, a common malefactor (strange that he got so little relish of the term!), caught red-handed; as Mattland, his duty was to hand her over to the law, to be dealt with as—what she was. Yet, even while these considerations were urging themselves upon him, he knew his eyes appraised her with open admiration and interest. She stood before him, slight, delicate, pretty, appealing in her ingenuous candor; and at his mercy. How could he bring himself to deal with her as he might with—well, Ansley himself? She was a woman, he a gentleman.

As Ansley, however—if he chose to assume that expert's identity for the nonce—he would be placed at once on a plane of equality with the girl; from a fellow of her craft she could hardly refuse attention. As Ansley, he would put himself in a position to earn her friendship, to gain—perhaps—her confidence, to learn something of her necessities, to aid and protect her from the consequences of her misdoings; possibly—to sum up—to divert her footsteps to the paths of a calling less hazardous and more honorable.

Worthy ambition—to reform a burglar! Mattland regained something of his lost self-esteem, applauding himself for entertaining a motive so laudable. And he chose his course, for better or worse, in those few seconds. Thoroughly proving his incontestable title to the name and repute of Mad Mattland.

His face lightened; his manner changed; he assumed with avidity the role for which she had cast him and which he stood so ready to accept and act.

"Well and good," he conceded with an air. "I suppose I may as well own up—"

"Oh, I know you," she assured him, with a little, confident shake of her head. "There's no deceiving me, but," and her smile became rueful, "if only you'd waited ten minutes more! Of course I recognized you from the first—down there by the river; and knew very well what was your—lay; you gave yourself away completely by mentioning the distance from the river to the Manor. And I did so want to get ahead of you on this job! What a feather in one's cap, to have forestalled Dan Ansley! . . . But hadn't you better be a little careful with those lights? You seem to forget that there are servants in the house. Really, you know, I find you most remarkably audacious. Mr. Ansley—quite in keeping with your reputation." (To be Continued.)

The Knock-out Blow.

The blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he'd have laughed at him for an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing home to the public a parallel fact; that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ of the human body, as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but the stomach we are utterly indifferent to, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. Golden Medical Discovery cures "weak stomach," indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Hage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Dr. Pierce's Great Thousand-Page Illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 51 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

UP-TO-DATE FASHIONS

FOR THE WEE MAIDEN.

DOINGS IN THE WORLD OF FASHION.

Every woman who goes away for a summer holiday this year carries a veranda cape with her, and finds it an invaluable possession. From the simplest cape of broadcloth, serge or satin to the most elaborately embroidered model, all are graceful and pretty, and a fashion more becoming and less seldom come our way. Even a plain, long, unlined cape of white serge with tailored finish, a hood lined with white liberty and a scarf of white liberty to knot at the throat, is a charming thing and has an air of modishness. Some women have had similar capes of dark blue serge, with black or colored satin and perhaps a touch of gold in buttons or clasps, made for general utility—show us, serviceable things to throw about one when a little extra warmth is needed and anything delicate would be out of place.

A loose, long warm coat of dark blue serge is another thing that will be found most desirable in a sea-shore outfit. Such a garment need not of course be in blue, black and white check with a touch of gray or mingled with black on collar and cuffs makes a good general utility coat, and indeed there are innumerable coats designed primarily for motoring which fall into the category with which we are dealing; but despite all this the most knowing of the practical seashore coats which we have seen have been in dark blue serge.

They are not, of course, as suitable for motoring as something which would show the dust less, but while not good for combination duty they are admirable for most seashore purposes. A good model is a loose three-quarter coat of wide waist, smooth finish, navy blue serge, with buttons covered in black satin and collar and cuffs of triple suggestion, white bordered with gold and black. A lining of soft black satin will give additional warmth.

One shop has shown very chic coats of white serge, along these same general lines, but at their best in all white, a little white blending and a touch of gold furnishing the trimming. These severely tailored garments are amazingly smart on a yacht and one suitable for many other purposes. One or two of the models had hoods lined with white, but for ordinary the coat without the hood is apt to be much more satisfactory.

Dinner and evening dress at the seashore offers certain problems to the woman of few clothes. Simple little frocks of dotted swiss, batiste, etc., frocks that can be easily freshened by pressing or laundering, are about the most practical things for youthful wearers, and if carefully made are used for the older woman too, though they are never so charming for her.

A pretty frock of sheer white wool is always a serviceable hotel evening gown, and voiles and kindred stuffs in delicate colors also stand the seashore dampness well. For more pretentious frocks the soft satins are excellent, though some of the exquisite new satins, nervously supple and light of weight, do crumple in a distressing and unexpected way, and the old reliable liberty gives better service.

A good Brussels net or other good firm net is satisfactory for such evening wear as we are discussing, and we have seen some very delightful net evening frocks of a simple sort, the trimming being chiefly of tucks fifteen or twenty closely grouped tucks may be the only trimming on skirt, and a tucked bodice and sleeves may have lace only for a finish on the ruff and décolletage and the sleeves. More elaborate gowns of net are embroidered in soutache.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Uncensured Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthily they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, which impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irritable heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Mrs. W. Johnson, of 127 Pearl St., Janesville, Wis., says: "For a long time I had a severe pain in my back that must have been due to some disorder of the kidneys. It was aching constantly and became so severe at times that I was almost prostrated. Numerous remedies that I tried, failed to help me and finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at The People's Drug Store. After using this remedy for a short time I found a complete cure, and the trouble has not returned."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

PREPARING THE WAY. Little Ethel—Mamma, I wish you'd wash Willie's face. Mamma—The idea! It's a neighbor's little boy. I have nothing to do with him. Little Ethel—But I have. We've become engaged, but I want to kiss him.

EXTERIOR OF THE BUILDING WHERE THE COMMONER IS PRINTED. IN LINCOLN, NEB.—THE COMMONER OCCUPIES THE GROUND FLOOR AND THE TWO UPPER FLOORS ARE RENTED FOR LODGING.

(By Heideck.)
Lincoln, Neb.—The city of Lincoln and its suburb, Fairview, are decidedly on the map. Lincoln and Fairview both owe their present debt to the three nominated William Jennings Bryan, Of Bryan, the orator, of Bryan the citizen, of Bryan the lecturer and of Bryan the politician, the country knows much. In fact, it is more intimately acquainted with his personality in these directions than even with the personality of his Republican opponent.

But of Bryan the editor, the country is comparatively unacquainted. It knows his paper principally as the mouthpiece for Bryan's proclamations. It does not know that the Commoner is operated on highly ideal lines.

and that it is one of the most successful publications in the United States. The announcement just made that Mr. Bryan will contribute the profits of the Commoner to the Democratic National Committee, as his contribution to the campaign fund, makes the paper of particular public interest at the present time. In a signed letter in the paper this week Mr. Bryan makes public this intention of making the paper an earning power for the Democratic Committee.

Mr. Bryan founded the Commoner and has been its active editorial head since the paper was started. He has written many of his editorials while on lecture tours through the country and it has been the chief organ for voicing his personal views on national subjects. For some time, however, the routine of the work has been delegated to others.

The fact that Mr. Bryan's third nomination removes him another step from the editorship of the publication, has given rise to the inquiry as to the probability that the Commoner would pass out of existence. In case Mr. Bryan were elected to the presidency, just one of the interesting things about the Commoner is the fact that this possibility has been anticipated.

with a highly idealistic "reserve fund," which provides employees and stockholders with insurance against loss of time or profit during such a period as the distinguished first citizen of Lincoln may occupy the White house.

This and other interesting circumstances are related in a current issue of a newspaper publishers' organization in the following graphic paragraphs:

"The Commoner does not occupy palatial quarters, but the two little editorial rooms present an interesting picture. No money has been squandered in furnishings and decorations. Well-worn cloth covers the floor of one room, and a faded old rug with ragged edges does its best to ornament the other. Two battered and worn desks and a table, all littered with newspapers and clippings, are the principal articles of furniture. Dusty shelves of old newspapers are piled in corners of the rooms, and the dingy, yellow walls show marks of thousands of journalistic wounds. Several heavily constructed chairs and a typewriter about complete the equipment. The rental of the offices is understood to be only $1,200 per year.

"Nevertheless the Commoner's sanctum looks like a real workshop and the presumed interior, one naturally thinks of Mr. Bryan in muddy overalls, feeding his chickens at Fairview. The picture fits the editorial office, homely, rough and ready, earnest and decent.

"The little business office of the Commoner, downstairs, shows up to better advantage. The desks are modern, the woodwork bright, and the girl clerks who stand at the tiny windows are delightfully polite and attentive. It is no trouble for them to look through great piles of old newspapers in search of little items asked for or to meet all the countless requests that pour into a newspaper office.

"They never ask if the applicant is a subscriber. It is quite enough for them that he is in search of information which the Commoner can give him.

"The business manager of the Commoner is Charles W. Bryan, brother of William J. Bryan, and the employees, including clerks, stenographers and girls in the mailing room, number about 60. The circulation of the Commoner is said to be about 180,000, some of which is represented by regular subscriptions at the rate of $1 a year, but the bulk of it is in the club class, at a lower rate.

profits derived from the Commoner is a puzzle. In view of Mr. Bryan's sur-

ROYCROFT PHILOSOPHY

By FRA ELBERTUS

THE NEUTRAL

There is known to me a prominent business house that by the very force of its directness and worth has incurred the enmity of many rivals. In fact, there is a very general conspiracy on hand to put the institution down and out.

In talking with a young man employed by this house, he yawned and said, "Oh, in this quarrel I am neutral."

"But you get your bread and butter from this firm, and in a matter where the very life of the institution is concerned, I do not see how you can be neutral."

And he changed the subject. I think if I enlisted in the Japanese army I would not be a neutral. Business is a fight—a continual struggle—just as life is. Man has reached his present degree of development through struggle. Struggle there must be and always will be. The struggle began purely physical; as man evolved it shifted around to the mental, psychic, and the spiritual, with a few dashes of cave-men proclivities still left. But depend upon it, the struggle will always be—life is activity. And when it gets to be a struggle in well-doing, it will be a real struggle. When inertia gets the better of you it is time to telephone to the undertaker. The only neutral in this life is a dead one.

RESPITE FOR CONGRESS

G. A. R. TO ASK NO LEGISLATION FOR THREE YEARS.

Salt Lake City Selected for Next Encampment—Atlanta to Ask It in 1910.

Toledo, O., Sept. 5.—Not for three years will the Grand Army of the Republic ask congress for further relief measures. Resolutions looking to an amendment to the service pension bill, reducing to 65 years the age at which a veteran can receive $20 a month, and another amending the pending widows' pension bill to make eligible all soldiers' widows who were married prior to the date of the bill, were laid over in favor of the resolution granting congress three years' respite from old soldier legislation.

It appeared to be the consensus of opinion of the leaders that too much hammering for pension bills and relief measures might create an unfavorable impression in the minds of congressmen and reflect discredit on the civil war veterans at the time in their lives when they would need the most assistance at the hands of the nation they helped to save.

After the installation of the newly-elected national officers at the morning session Friday, the G. A. R. delegates decided upon Salt Lake City as the next meeting place.

Vice-Commander-in-Chief Scott notified the encampment that Atlanta, with more skyscrapers and better and more hotels, outside of seaside resorts, would be in the field in 1910. His only fear was that she could not care for all the "Johnnies" who would come to greet them from three states. This was greeted with great applause, cheers and calls: "We will go." "We want to go."

FLEET LEAVES MELBOURNE.

American Battleships Sail for Albany to Take on Coal.

Melbourne, Sept. 5.—Cheered by thousands of Australians, the American battleships weighed anchor at eight o'clock Saturday morning and sailed away from Melbourne. They stop next at Albany, West Australia, where a week will be spent taking coal.

Friday the last of the entertainments for officers and men were given. The state government entertained Admiral Sperry and the senior officers at an elaborate luncheon in Parliament House. For the others there were baseball and lacrosse matches and a regatta.

In the evening the warrant, petty and non-commissioned officers of the American fleet were entertained on shore by the officers of equal rank of the Commonwealth naval and military forces of Victoria, and the state government provided a wonderful display of fireworks at Albert park.

DISCARDED SUITOR SLAYS.

Omaha Man Murders Girl Who was About to Wed Another.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 5.—Crazed by jealousy when informed that his sweetheart, Edna Kennett, a checker at the Loyal hotel, was about to marry William Witt, another auditor, Daniel Godoll Friday evening shot Miss Kennett on the street, inflicting wounds from which she died an hour later, and then attempted to blow out his own brains. The bullet glanced, however, and he will probably recover. Miss Kennett's parents reside in Lincoln.

Motor Car Upsets; One Dead.

St. Joseph, Mo., Sept. 5.—While a party of West Liberty (Ind.) men and women were driving along the highway south of this place, en route to Ottumwa, their 60-horse power automobile slipped into a ditch and overturned, killing one man, C. H. Milnes, and injuring four others.

Not for Her.

A woman never arrives at the point in life when she is glad to be told that she "doesn't look a day more than 40."

Carpets Cleaned By Electricity

No Dust or Dirt. No Taking Up or Laying of Carpets.

The work is done with a little box-like machine on rubber tired wheels which is taken into the room you want cleaned. The connection is made with your electric light socket, a button turned, and the suction apparatus starts. By suction all the dust and dirt is drawn from the carpet and deposited in the machine. We estimate to clean a 9x12 carpet in an hour. The cost is 75c an hour.

This method may seem somewhat expensive at first glance, but when it is remembered that there is no taking up or putting down of the carpet, and dust or dirt in connection with the work you will readily see that it is economical and very satisfactory. It is highly recommended by those who are familiar with the method.

The machine has been used in the Masonic hall with excellent success. Mr. Korst of the Electric company is familiar with the machine and endorses it highly.
